Queensland hospital admissions 'unsustainable'

Health Minister Cameron Dick agreed the rate of growth of hospital admissions was concerning. "Some of that can be put down to population growth and ageing, but the number of potentially preventable admissions is too high," he said in a statement.

The Medical Cannabis Users Association of Australia Inc and users of cannabis in the community would like to direct the Health Minister's attention to an easy and affordable solution to this problem.

Fresh Raw Cannabis is a food that can prevent and treat illness naturally. It is non psycho-active and grows like a weed.

Some call cannabis the "most important vegetable on the planet" because it can assist the function of your immune system, provide anti-inflammatory benefits, and improve bone metabolism and neural function. In fact, research has shown medical cannabis is even capable of inhibiting cancer cell growth. Benefits of raw, juiced cannabis include reduced inflammation and the facilitation of two way cellular communication. Many cannabinoids also have anti-tumor properties which are readily available through the consumption of raw cannabis.

Cannabis could be grown in any back yard garden for the cost of a tomato plant. This, along with hemp seed foods included in the daily diet, is a simple economical solution that could go a long way to improving the future health of the nation.

We offer this advice in good faith. Cannabis is the peoples' medicine. We shouldn't need a doctor to prescribe a food. Nor should we have to wait the for govt permission to grow cannabis for food or medicine.

The public understand the hoax that introduced prohibition of cannabis and we are left wondering when the Governments will wake up. If Queensland truly wants to lead the way in medical cannabis innovation it is time to get "real" and consider its innumerable benefits not only to health but also to the economy. It is past time for them to discard the propaganda, shed their paranoia and re-legalize cannabis for all its uses.
